David DeNinno joins The Penn Air Group

The Penn Air Group announced today that Mr. David J. DeNinno has joined the organization as President and Chief Operating Officer. According to Herman Philhower, CEO of The Penn Air Group, “We are very pleased that Mr. DeNinno has decided to join our organization. His strategic vision, organizational skills, and marketing and sales expertise will enable the company to grow to the next level”.

Mr. DeNinno is a highly successful business executive with over 25 years of experience in providing products and services to the healthcare field. Under his direction as president and chairman of the strategic planning committee, CME, Inc., became the largest independent provider of continuing medical education in the country, with three operating divisions: Publishing, Meetings, and Multimedia. His company gained the same accreditation as Harvard, Yale and the AMA to provide continuing medical education to physicians. Their product offerings included over 400 meetings per year, the second largest annual trade show in psychiatry, the leading publication in psychiatry, and the number one mental health website. During his tenure, they purchased a primary care educational company, developed and launched a new publication in geriatrics and developed the second largest annual trade show in that field.

Since his retirement from CME, and prior to joining The Penn Air Group, Mr. DeNinno had been consulting for a variety of organizations on strategic planning, sales management, organizational design, and continuous quality improvement. His programs have been featured on CNN, the Today Show and the Jane Pauley Show.

Mr. DeNinno said, “I’m ecstatic about becoming part of a dynamic team again, especially one that is so perfectly positioned to take advantage of the Green (Energy Saving) Movement”.
